Re: Enviro-Save Power-Train Protection Products.

Steve,

In February 2009 we installed the Enviro-Save product into one of our Police Department fleet vehicles. After spending time closely monitoring the fuel consumption of this test vehicle over a three (3) month period, we determined the use of Enviro-Save in our test vehicle resulted in an increase of 1.28 miles per gallon. Our test vehicle was a 2005 Chevy Impala with 56k miles.

After completing the initial test, I authorized Enviro-Save to be added to the eleven remaining Police Department fleet vehicles followed by fuel monitoring just as was completed in our initial testing. After a 3 month monitoring of each, we concluded that the addition of Enviro-Save to our fleet resulted in an increase of 1.47 mpg over the fleet as an average. Recorded data revealed that one of our fleet vehicles saw as much as 1.74 mpg increase. Our officers also reported an increase in overall vehicle performance during the same time frame even though vehicle performance data was not collected.

In conclusion, the Whitestown Police Department fleet vehicles showed a significant increase in overall mpg to more than offset the initial purchase investment of Enviro-Save. During this economy the ability to stretch tax dollars is essential. Just as other agencies, we are being asked to extend the life of our fleet by two years. The ability to increase mpg, overall vehicle performance while reducing engine wear will truly assist in accomplishing this task.

Projections are that Enviro-Save will result in a fuel cost savings of approximately ($7000) seven thousand dollars per year to our budget and the taxpayers of our community. Our fleet service provider has even recommended that we stretch our preventive maintenance from 3000 miles to 5000 miles for all of our fleet vehicles not using synthetic oils and to a 6000 mile minimum for those who are. This recommendation was based on the condition of our motor oil after 3000 miles with the Enviro-Save additive, leading to even more cost savings.

Thank you for sharing this product with us and for all your follow up communications.

Kindest regards,
